Some stats: the first 20km was raced at an average of 39.3kph, the last 15km at 41.6kph and the whole race at 40.2kph.

Clint Hackney rode away from the start and was followed soon after by Ian Bridges-Webb. These 2 gained a fairly handy lead and held on for about 2 laps or so before coming back to the bunch. Jason Lindsay and Peter Wakefield were next to try their hand at a break and were also away for around 1 or 2 laps. On the catch, a number of surges went up the road and the speed of the race lifted a notch; Machado and Stacey slipped away for a lap and then Sly Zust bridged across. These 3 worked steadily for a lap and the ensuing chase split the bunch behind into 2 groups with 2 laps to go. Around 9 or 10 riders formed the front group and just before the bridge on the final run up the straight, Paul Kenny rode off the front followed by Sly Zust and Geoff Turnbull. These were the first 3 places in that order.
